THE WAR COUNCIL

The Great Crusade was a mammoth operation involving millions of troops and thousands of ships. Imperial armies fought campaigns across the broad sweep of the galaxy. Tens of thousands of human worlds needed to be saved.

The Imperial military of this time comprised the entire force of Space Marine Legions, hundreds of auxiliary regiments drawn from the freshly reconquered worlds, gigantic war machines supplied by the Mechanicum and their Forge Worlds, foremost amongst these the mighty Titans of the Collegia Titanica, and a host of other smaller organisations and armed formations. The most significant of the smaller formations were the Custodian Guard, the Emperor's Bodyguard.

All of these were supported by a bewildering array of battleships, dropships and troop transports variously commanded by the Space Marine Legions, the Mechanicum and the other Imperial Commanders and leaders.

To manage the execution of the Great Crusade the Emperor convened the War Council. This effectively became the ruling body of the Imperium during the Great Crusade and through it the Emperor's law was brought to hundreds of thousands of human worlds.

The Emperor sat at the head of Council; at his right hand was Malcador. Each of the Primarchs had a seat on the Council, as did the chief custodian. When the Emperor made his alliance with Mars the fabricator-general of the Mechanicum was offered a seat. Supporting the Council was a team of astropaths who provided communication between the members since it became increasingly impractical for the group to physically assemble given the size of the growing Imperium and the inherent difficulties of travel through the warp.

MALCADOR THE SIGILLITE

During the conquest of Earth the Emperor gathered about him trusted lieutenants and gave to them tasks and duties befitting men of status. Most of these servants were drawn from the ranks of his bodyguard and Space Marine Legions.

Malcador was an exception. He was not a warrior but a man of learning with the bearing of a priest. From the early years of the Battle of Unification he was ever-present at the Emperor's side. His origins were unknown to all save perhaps the Emperor. He wore the hooded robes of a simple Terran administrator.

Malcador was appointed to run the Emperor's Palace and through it he managed the administration of newly conquered Terra. As the Crusade progressed Malcador's power and influence grew as he became overseer of the Imperial Tithe and chief of the Imperial Administration.

Blessed with unnaturally long life there were many rumours about the true nature of this enigmatic figure. Some say he was a psyker, the first to have undergone the soul-binding ritual. Other rumours say that he was distantly related to the Emperor.

Over the centuries, the Alpha Legion have used this method of warfare to pull Imperial forces to neighbouring sectors, before attacking in force, their warships and ruthless soldiers pouring out of the Eye of Terror to assail a now-unprotected world.

It was agents of the Alpha Legion who led to the eventual destruction of the Emperor's Swords Chapter midway through the 40th Millennium. For more than a dozen generations, agents of the Alpha Legion infiltrated the hive slums of Ghorstangrad, the Emperor's Swords' home world. Through subtle manipulation of the most dominant sects and gangs, the Alpha Legion began to take control of the disordered urban nightmare from which the Emperor's Swords recruited, seeding potential future Space Marines with all manner of deviant philosophies and subconscious triggers. Certain images and phrases used in clandestine rituals on the very young inculcated following generations to react in predetermined ways. Over many decades, though many of these brainwashed youths were rejected by the Librarians and Chaplains, some were recruited by the Emperor's Swords – a lurking threat unknown even to the recruits.

Almost three centuries after they had first put their plan into motion, the Alpha Legion broke out of the Eye of Terror and attacked Ghorstangrad. When the Emperor's Swords met them in combat, the Alpha Legion unleashed all manner of hypnotic and disorienting psychic attacks, releasing the nascent personalities hidden deep within the minds of the unknowing infiltrators. Dazed and distressed, these few deranged Space Marines turned on their battle brethren, and within hours the Chapter disintegrated into a morass of battling factions, some of which joined forces directly with the Alpha Legion and others who simply fought on for their own survival. The Emperor's Swords were destroyed, Ghorstangrad was razed, and the gene-seed of the Chapter was stolen. Many of the Chapter's Space Marines have gone on to become infamous reavers in their own right, either leading warbands of their own or in the colours of the Alpha Legion.

The Emperor's Swords were not the first Chapter split by the corruption of Chaos, and certainly will not be the last. Battle brother against battle brother, Company against Company, the Dark Gods of Chaos can bring division and death even to Chapters that few would ever doubt. Sometimes the Chapter never recovers, sometimes the loyalists triumph, hunting down and destroying their wayward battle brethren, and on occasion the renegades escape justice and flee the wrath of their former comrades. It is a great stain upon the honour of a Chapter for its warriors to turn renegade and it will be scrutinised heavily for centuries after such events, as agents of the Adeptus Terra and Inquisition seek to root out any lingering malfaeasance.

These were some of the first items I bought from CHS. They are fantastic! They fit snugly on a SM model and had no flash whatsoever. I fitted out an entire battle company with them and plan on doing even more.
